

William A. Lockwood, Jr.
(Bill)

Bill is the founder and president of ComputerTalk Associates, Inc., located in Blue Bell, Pa. His company, which was formed in 1980, publishes ComputerTalk for the Pharmacist, a bimonthly publication on computer technology.

He is also the executive director of the American Society for Automation in Pharmacy (ASAP), an organization he was instrumental in forming in 1988. ASAP represents the interests of companies providing computer-based products and services to the pharmacy market. More than 160 companies and organizations are members of ASAP.

Bill serves on the advisory board of the Fairleigh Dickinson University School of Pharmacy, where he has established a scholarship fund in his name.

He holds a B.S. degree from Fairleigh Dickinson University and earned his M.B.A. from Indiana University.